IN RECENT NEWS:

Crews are making steady progress towards reaching the key rock outcropping at Regent's Slide. To safely advance downhill, they have installed approximately 4,443 shear dowels. These long steel rods anchor the hillside, helping to reduce movement.

Work is currently underway to set anchor points for a new drapery system, which will secure and guide loose rocks safely down the slope. The drapery netting has been acquired and is being staged for future installation as the project progresses.

Specialized equipment known as "spiders" - small excavators - is still being used to remove loose rocks from steep areas carefully.
